One plate too many

Texas should eliminate the requirement of a front license plate on vehicles.

All four states that border Texas do not require one. In fact, every state due east of Texas, to the Atlantic Ocean, does not. We should follow their lead.

Toll-reading equipment can be adjusted, and the fronts of electric vehicles would not have to allow for that potentially interfering metal. But mostly think of how the unblemished, stylishly designed front of our pretty pickups would appear more svelte.

Reason enough.
