Congress made call on daylight saving time

In her Oct. 31 column ("Enough with daylight saving time already"), Winter Prosapio wonders about why the end of daylight saving time was moved so that it is now a week longer than the last Sunday in October.

The reason is Halloween.

The goal was to be sure the kiddos would have as much light as possible. If the last Sunday came before the 31st, then the goblins would be begging in the dark.

So, you see, our Congress really can make a sensible decision.
