

Why isn't Enterprise stationed in Houston?

The loss of Neil Armstrong is a reminder of the final resting places of our space shuttles.

Endeavor is in California because of the proximity to the vital Jet Propulsion Laboratory. Discovery is in Florida near where it was launched. Reasonable choices.

But Enterprise is in New York City, which made absolutely no contribution to the program.

The typical northeast bias replaced common sense.

The shuttle should be in the city that was the heart of the missions. The NASA administrator ignored what was the first word said by Mr. Armstrong upon landing on the moon.

Star Carey
Canyon Lake